

DRAFT CALL LANGUAGE FOR FY09 FACULTY SEARCHES

Public Relations. The department of communication at Georgia State University in Atlanta invites applicants for a tenure-track assistant professor position in public relations to begin in August 2009. Ph.D. required. Candidates should have research programs underway in one of the following areas: public relations, PR ethics, communication campaigns, PR/marketing, health PR, mass communication, journalism studies. Candidates should have the ability to teach in the department's undergraduate PR sequence and also contribute to work done in the M.A. and doctoral mass communication programs. Applications should include a letter of application and CV, transcripts, examples of scholarly work, three letters of recommendation, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. An offer of employment will be conditional upon background verification. Review of applications to begin October 15, 2008. Georgia State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer. Women, minorities, and candidates from other traditionally under-represented groups are especially encouraged to apply. Address applications to Dr. Greg Lisby, Search Chair, Department of Communication, Georgia State University, One Park Place South, Suite 630, Atlanta, GA 30302-4000.

Public Relations. The department of communication at Georgia State University in Atlanta invites applicants for a lecturer in public relations to begin in August 2009. Ph.D. required. Candidates will ideally have a background that combines professional work in the public relations or corporate communication sector with an active interest in the academic research connecting to public relations. Candidates will mainly teach in the department's undergraduate PR sequence and also contribute to work done in the M.A. mass communication program. Lecturers are eligible for annual renewal in ways that can culminate in promotion to rank of Senior Lecturer; the position does not require an ongoing research program but is centered on teaching (4-4 annual workload) and a departmental service assignment. Applications should include a letter of application and CV, transcripts, three letters of recommendation, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. An offer of employment will be conditional upon background verification. Review of applications to begin October 15, 2008. Georgia State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer. Women, minorities, and candidates from other traditionally under-represented groups are especially encouraged to apply. Address applications to Dr. Greg Lisby, Search Chair, Department of Communication, Georgia State University, One Park Place South, Suite 630, Atlanta, GA 30302-4000.

Journalism Studies. The department of communication at Georgia State University in Atlanta invites applicants for a tenure-track assistant professor position in mass communication to begin in August 2009. Ph.D. required. Candidates should have research programs underway in one of the following areas: journalism studies, media studies, social production of the news, journalism ethics, new media studies as they pertain to journalism. Candidates who combine close connections or a work history in the news industry with an active scholarly program preferred. Candidates should have the ability to teach in the department's undergraduate journalism sequence (e.g., mass communication studies, newswriting, desktop publishing, telecommunications production) and also contribute to work done in the M.A. and doctoral mass communication programs. Applications should include a letter of application and CV, transcripts, examples of scholarly work, three letters of recommendation, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. An offer of employment will be conditional upon background verification. Review of applications to begin October 15, 2008. Georgia State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer. Women, minorities, and candidates from other traditionally under-represented groups are especially encouraged to apply. Address applications to Dr. Cindy Hoffner, Search Chair, Department of Communication, Georgia State University, One Park Place South, Suite 630, Atlanta, GA 30302-4000.